9 وَكَذَّبَ بِٱلْحُسْنَىٰ

10 فَسَنُيَسِّرُهُۥ لِلْعُسْرَىٰ

11 وَمَا يُغْنِى عَنْهُ مَالُهُۥٓ إِذَا تَرَدَّىٰٓ

12 إِنَّ عَلَيْنَا لَلْهُدَىٰ

> Golden rule. Do not move to the next ayah until the current one is fluent three times without looking. Slow is fast. Ten perfect ayahs beat thirty shaky ones.

THE 25-MINUTE DRILL

☐ Listen (2 min) — tap `Audio/092-009-012.mp3` in the Files app and play it 3×. For one ayah on its own, use `Audio/092-001.mp3` and so on. Do not read along.

☐ Look (5 min) — read the portion from the mushaf aloud 5×, slowly.

☐ Cover + record (6 min) — recite from memory 5×, and record the pass from memory. When a line breaks, go back to that line, not the whole page. One take — do not stop and restart.

☐ Listen back (1 min) — once, same day. You are not admiring it. Write down what broke.

☐ Sabqi (7 min) — yesterday plus the last 3 days, from memory, no looking. Mark every stumble.

☐ Manzil (3 min) — one old chunk, fast, no looking.

☐ Repair — every ayah that broke above gets written out 3× from memory, then checked against the mushaf. Usually 1–3 ayahs, about 3 minutes. On a bad day the drill runs 28 minutes, not 25 — that is correct, not a failure.

☐ Log (1 min) — write it in the ledger. One line.

RECORD IT

Record the pass from memory — not the reading pass. Recording yourself reading the page teaches nothing; recording yourself recalling it is the only version worth keeping.

Save as `undated_092-009-012.mp3` in `/Quran/Hifz/Recordings/`.

One take. Listen back once and only to note what broke. Never re-record until it is perfect — that feels like diligence and is how hifz time disappears.

WRITING — REPAIR, NOT DUTY

Daily writing of 3–4 lines costs 10–15 minutes and would double this budget. So writing is reserved for the mutashabihat — the verses that look alike, where hifz actually collapses. The rule is narrow and absolute: broken ayah → written 3× that day, from memory, then checked. Copying the mushaf is nearly worthless; recalling onto paper then checking is the version that works.

PRAY WITH IT

Recite this portion in your sunnah/nafl prayers this week. Twenty salah repetitions beat an hour of review desk-time, and it costs you nothing you are not already spending.
